Excerpt: .upon the floor, and she said to it: Cloth, spread yourself. In a second the cloth was covered with such fine eating and drinking as the little old woman had never seen before. There were puddings, and jam, and tarts, and cakes, and ice cream, and lemonade. The little old woman sat down and ate her fill, but as she was eating, the innkeeper, who had smelled the feast, peeped through the keyhole. A very fine tablecloth for me, thought the innkeeper. So, when the little old woman was sleeping, the innkeeper took the North Wind s magic tablecloth, and hid it in his cupboard. When the little old woman awoke in the morning, she looked, and looked, and looked for her tablecloth, but she could not find it. Then she hurried back to the North Wind and told him what had happened. Well, said the North Wind, I must give you my magic staff. Say to it, Stafi, dance, , and the person whose toes it dances upon, that person has the magic tablecloth. So the little old woman thanked the North Wind, and she hurried back to the inn with the magic staff. There sat the innkeeper and all his guests with the magic tablecloth spread between them. They were eating and drinking good things. Staff, dance, said the little old woman, loudly. Then the magic staff began to dance right merrily, up and down, to and fro, right and left. But...
