Not illustrated. 1906 Excerpt: . . . hour an a half to sweep an dust, another hour an a half to straighten things out a little, an then they stand around with both ears pricked up like a jack-rabbit listening V the noon whistle. The parts a their close that their poor old unfortunate mothers have t patch the most are the seats a their pants an their watch pockets. Old Ike paused and stretched his legs. Then turning suddenly--Say, did old man Hemminway get that bottle a hoss medicine Yes, sir, responded Bayard promptly. Did he pay for it No, sir. Did you charge it No, sir. There you have it, right there! We dont have to go down to Emporia, Kansas, f a horrible example: weve got one right here. A county commissioner comes in and leaves a polish receipt which some blind piano-tuner has sent to a farm paper, and which the printers have got tangled up on and recommended for heaves. You put it up, mark it, and lay it back on the ledge. By an by the victim a misplaced confidence comes back and calls V his dope and you pass it out, leanin meanwhile agin the counter to keep from falling over an breakin your arm. He says charge it; you come out of it long enough to say all right, and then suffer a relapse. While you stand right there in your tracks with a vacant stare on your face, the old man drives five miles...
