Not illustrated. 1898 Excerpt: .of lime, not phosphate of alumina, should be considered equal to phosphate in ground coprolite. However, as undissolved mineral phosphate is almost universally considered greatly inferior to undissolved bone phosphate, the rule would have a decidedly salutary effect in causing manufacturers to turn all the phosphate into the soluble form; but it happens that what is condemned as insoluble mineral phosphate commonly contains a proportion of dissolved phosphate that has reverted to an insoluble form which is little inferior and probably in the potent climates of Ceylon is quite equal to the soluble phosphate, so that it is a manifest injustice to the manufacturer not to allow anything for it because it is practically insoluble in water. Some eminent chemists hold that all the soluble phosphate reverts to the form insoluble in water in the soil before it is taken up by the plant, and that the only advantage which the initial solubility gives it, is a greater diffusive power before it reverts. When alkaline substances such as ashes are mixed with soluble phosphates much of the latter reverts. In Belgium agricultural chemists are decidedly ahead of us in their mode of valuing phosphates. Mr. K. Walter, chemical engineer, Aurelais, Belgium, informs us in the Chemical News, that it was announced that from the 1st of January, 1878, in phosphates coming under the control of the Belgian agricultural stations, all phosphoric acid soluble in citrate of ammonia must be counted assimilable and of the same value..
